Common Core Curriculum Framework

The Common Core Curriculum Framework was designed in the TUSD Office of High School Leadership in the 2011-2012 school year.

Notes regarding use of this framework:

- 1. This structure will:
- Provide in-common definitions of anchor standards
- Articulate district-wide enduring understandings for all TUSD ELA classrooms
- Support curriculum guide work for individual sites and classrooms through additional instructional and curricular resources.
- 2. In an effort to assist teachers in understanding the alignment between the standard ELA classroom and the Culturally Relevant ELA classroom, this document includes the following additions:
- Sample essential questions
- Suggested activities in each standard and cluster
- Recommended texts to expand the scope of texts students will use during the year
- Sequenced topics (or unit headings) for each class
- 3. In keeping with the Common Core grade level bands, this document reflects both the 11th and 12th grade Culturally Relevant classes. The enduring understandings and the Common Core standards for all ELA classrooms in the 11-12 band are the same. At the 11th grade level, the teacher provides scaffolding and support through instructional design and activities. At the 12th grade level, students are expected to work independently and proficiently. The distinctions between the classes are found with:
- Essential questions at each grade level
- Suggested activities at each grade level
- Recommend texts specific to each grade level
- Sequenced topics for each class

ELA Curriculum Framework: Culturally Relevant ELA: Mexican American Viewpoint

Topics of Study

Explanation: the topics below reflect the content areas of emphasis for each ELA Mexican American Viewpoint class. As with the general education ELA classroom, teachers have individual discretion in terms of the exact texts (from the recommended text list), quantity of text, and amount of time on topic. Through these topics of study, teachers are able to align instruction and activities to Common Core standards.

ELA Curriculum Framework: Culturally Relevant ELA: Mexican American Viewpoint

Strand: Reading Literature Grades 11-12

Cluster: Key Ideas and Details

Enduring Understanding: Imaginative texts can provide rich and timeless insights into universal themes, dilemmas and social realities of the world. Literary text represents complex stories in which the reflective and apparent thoughts and actions of human beings are revealed. Life therefore shapes literature and literature shapes life.

Essential Questions: (refer to Appendix A for extended sample Essential Questions tied to specific Topics of Study)

English 5, 6

- 1. How do different voices address a common theme or central idea?
- 2. What makes an individual an insider or an outsider in American society?
- 3. How does the definition of Chicano vary by author or context?
- 4. How does literature highlight the strengths and flaws of a given society and the relationship between its cultural and racial groups?

English 7, 8

- 1. Why did some Mexican Americans use 'passing' as a means to assimilate into white American society?
- 2. How can character occupations in literature reflect or reinforce broader concepts and themes?
- 3. How has literature served as a vehicle for addressing issues related to race and racism?
- 4. How does literature serve to deconstruct and challenge negative beliefs about race?
- 5. How can writers challenge and change public consciousness?
- 6. How is the coming of age story both universal and culturally specific?

Standard Statements

Examples and Explanations

The student reader will:

11-12.RL.1 Cite strong and thorough textual evidence to support analysis of what the text says explicitly as well as inferences drawn from the text, including determining where the text leaves matters uncertain.

11-12.RL.2 Determine two or more themes or central ideas of a text and analyze their development over the course of the text, including how they interact and build on one another to produce a complex account; provide an objective summary of the text.

11-12.RL.3 Analyze the impact of the author's choices regarding how to develop and relate elements of a story or drama.

- English 5, 6
 1. Write an explanatory essay in which you analyze folktales and legends, such as the legends of La Llorona, Popocatepetl and Ixtaccihuatl, and Juan Diego and the Virgin Mary, to determine why such stories endure, how they are used, and what they reveal about human nature. Pay particular attention to the explicit story versus the implicit, teaching aspect of the story.
 2. Read Gaspar Perez de Villagra's account of the siege of Acoma and the letter from Governor Don Antonio de Otermin detailing events from the Pueblo Revolt of 1680. Create a graphic organizer in which you illustrate how each writer characterizes the region's native people, citing evidence from both texts. Use quotations from the text to show how the authors' develop their attitudes as the text develops.
 2. Analyze multiple Maximum American authors' (2, 5) use of Spanish phrases and pames to add
- 3. Analyze multiple Mexican American authors' (3-5) use of Spanish phrases and names to add meaning to their work (e.g., the names of characters in Sandra Cisneros's short story, "Woman Hollering Creek"). Why do the authors make specific language choices? How do those choices impact the story development and impact? Present your analysis in a formal presentation to your literature circle small group.

English 7, 8

1. Engage in close readings of one author's novels, short stories, and poetry, focusing on the way the authors create images of the barrio (e.g., Gary Soto's poems Oranges and Ode to the Raspado and excerpts from his Living Up the Street: Narrative recollections; selections from Luis Rodríguez's The Concrete River; and from Carmen Tafolla's Sonnets to Human Beings and Other Selected Works). In an explanatory essay, use specific text evidence from each title to support your analysis.

2. After viewing the film Mi Familia , be prepared to participate in a Socratic Seminar discussion in which you will discuss themes that are developed across the movie and how they intersect with one another.
3. In literature circles while reading Always Running , contrast the coming of age experiences of the narrator with the experiences of you and your peers. Collaborate with your peers to develop a definition for coming of age that encompasses the multiple elements, both universal and specific to cultural group. Be prepared to support your definition with text evidence and anecdotal evidence from small group discussion.
In the previous grade band
Students were expected to determine the impact of figurative and connotative words on tone, examine how an author's choice of structure influences the text, and analyze multiple points of view.

EXAMPLE INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES

Socratic Seminar

The Socratic Seminar provides autonomy for the students in a communal format in which students must cite strong and thorough textual evidence to support analysis of what the text says. Areas to explore include how authors use literary techniques such as theme, characterization, plot, specific details, etc., within a work. Information about the Socratic Seminar can be found at http://www.saskschools.ca/curr_content/bestpractice/socratic/index.html

Plot Analysis/Conventions

Use picture books (Cinderella stories, fairy tales) to analyze plot and to introduce common conventions. After reading a picture book, students apply concepts to another work of literature. For example, the novel Ethan Frome contains the same fairy tale elements as Snow White. For a variation of this, try introducing a work of literature using one of the "I Wish" songs from any Disney princess movie.

3x3 Literary Analysis of Plot for Central Idea

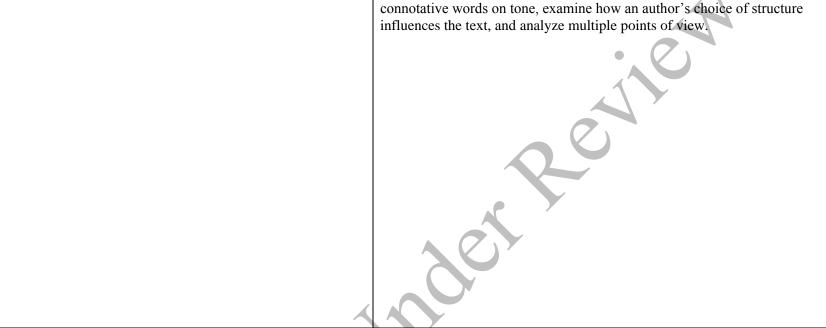

Create a chart for students to complete which has three spaces for students to summarize the plot in three words (noun, action verb, object) for each of the beginning, middle and end of the story. Then, chart three spaces below for students to write in three words (noun, action verb, object) to analyze the development of the plot over the course of the text. Students then use those sentences to determine the central idea.

EXAMPLE INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES

Change the Structure

Students change the resolution of a story and discuss the impact on rewritten tone/meaning/etc. This strategy helps students understand structure and how an author's choices contribute to overall structure/meaning/aesthetic impact. For example, Hester exposes Dimmesdale. How does this change impact other characters, minor plot lines, etc?

Choose a Word/Phrase

Students choose a word or phrase from literature that is interesting, confusing, descriptive or relates to a literary element (figurative language) and write it on a sticky note. The sticky notes are posted around the classroom. Students then take blank sticky notes and silently read and comment on others' observations. Students then share their quotations and their favorite comments with the class.

Reconstruct the Plot

Expose students to works of literature that are not in chronological order and/or are told from various point of views. For example, in the novel Ellen Foster, the time shifts and students must pay careful attention to what is happening. One way to handle this is to have students create a chart to track the time period. They could then reconstruct the plot in chronological order.

Ballad Writing

After familiarizing themselves with ballad themes and forms, students write their own original ballads, which they will perform in small groups. Students engage in self-reflection on their group performances and on the literary characteristics of their ballads. Students read, analyze and discuss medieval English ballads and then list characteristics of the genre. Students will emphasize the narrative characteristics of ballads by choosing a ballad to act out. Using the Venn diagram tool, students next compare medieval ballads with modern ones.

Compare/Contrast

Students compare and contrast (in essay form, in chart form, in visual form) two writers from the same time period. Emily Dickinson and Walt Whitman work well for this type of activity because they seem to have nothing in common, but they both are rebellious and they both revolutionized American poetry.

Compare an Issue

Students compare text from a time period on an issue with historical events resulting from those beliefs. End with a seminar letting students draw and support their own conclusions. Students need to synthesize materials and evaluate the information.

ELA Curriculum Framework: Culturally Relevant ELA: Mexican American Viewpoint

Strand: Reading Literature Grades 11-12

Cluster: Range of Reading and Level of Text Complexity

Enduring Understanding: In order to meet the rigorous demands of college and/or the workforce, students must be able to read and comprehend increasingly complex literary text. Through extensive reading of a variety of genres from diverse cultures and a range of time periods, students will gain literary knowledge and build important reading skills and strategies, as well as become familiar with various text structures and elements. When teachers match students with challenging, engaging text in the classroom it creates an atmosphere that helps to nurture curious, capable and critical readers.

Essential Questions: (refer to Appendix A for extended sample Essential Questions tied to specific Topics of Study)

English 5, 6

- 1. What are borders and who defines them?
- 2. What reading strategies are useful with different types of texts?
- 3. How have traditional oral forms such as folktales, proverbs (dichos), legends, ballad (corridos), and historical accounts passed along by word-of-mouth shaped Mexican American literature?

English 7, 8

- 1. Why did some Mexican Americans use "passing" as a means to assimilate into white American society?
- 2. How have Mexican American writers redefined Western literary genres to reflect their own cultural values and norms?

Standard Statements

The student reader will:

11-12.RL.10 By the end of grade 11, read and comprehend literature, including stories, dramas, and poems, in the grades 11 text complexity band proficiently, with scaffolding as needed at the high end of the range. By the end of grade 12, read and comprehend literature, including stories, dramas, and poems, at the high end of the grades 11 text complexity band independently and proficiently.

Teachers need to match complex, grade-appropriate texts to their students.

Examples and Explanations English 5, 6

1. Compare Henry Reyna's fictional life in Zoot Suit with the historical Henry Leyvas's life, and create a well-developed thesis statement explaining why Valdez may have made the choices he did in fictionalizing Henry's life for the stage. Support the thesis with specific details from specific passages in two formal academic paragraphs.

English 7, 8

1. After closely reading The Tempest, represent Shakespeare's characterizations of the new world in a media presentation. Clarify between the perceptions of Elizabethan England and Shakespeare's (apparent) personal world view.

In the previous grade band...

Students were expected to read and comprehend literature, including stories, dramas and poems in the grades 9-10 text complexity band proficiently, with scaffolding as needed at the high end of the range. By the end of grade 10, students were expected to read and comprehend literature, including stories, dramas and poems at the high end of the grades 9-10 text complexity band independently and proficiently.

English 5, 6 – Culturally Relevant Mexican American Viewpoint (11th Grade) English 7, 8 – Culturally Relevant Mexican American Viewpoint (12th Grade) CURRICULUM NOT ADOPTED

Audio Text

Students listen to a compact disc (online audio) of the text being read. Low-level readers/learners may be able to enjoy and comprehend the more complex concepts of higher order thinking skills while listening. More advanced readers can follow along in the book to understand proper pronunciation of new vocabulary introduced in the text.

Music and Literature

Scaffold student learning of classic texts by introducing key plot elements through video and song. For example, when introducing the poem "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," show students the scenes from the teen movie Telling You where the ancient mariner appears (he tells part of his story at a pizza parlor). Then play Iron Maiden's version of "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner," noting that the music dramatically slows down when the mariner is stuck on the water. Show pictures of an albatross while the song plays. Students can then read the text with greater understanding.

In the previous grade band... Students were expected to cite and draw inferences from the text, examine the development of the central ideas, and analyze how the author's analysis of the text shapes the development of its events and ideas.

Cornell Note-Taking System

Students use an adapted version of the Cornell System for Note-Taking while they read. Using the basic page format of "Cue (Recall)" column, "Summary" section and "Note Taking" area, students take their notes as they read rather than as they listen to a lecture. A full explanation of the Cornell System for Note-Taking is available at http://www.montgomerycollege.edu/Departments/enreadtp/Cornell.html

Jigsaw

Use the jigsaw approach to reading by dividing the text into segments so that each student is responsible for only one segment or one idea. Students then share knowledge learned with the class. Students are less intimidated when they have a smaller amount of text to process, but they still are practicing deep reading skills.

Double-Entry Journal

Students keep double-entry journals as they read. In the left-hand column, the student copies or summarizes text which is intriguing, puzzling or moving or which connects to a previous entry or situation. In the right-hand column, the student reacts to the quotation or summary. The entry may include a comment, a question, a connection made or an analysis.

A Socratic Seminar provides autonomy for the students in a communal format in which students must cite strong and thorough textual evidence to support analysis of what the text says. Areas to explore include how the author uses the development of the central idea or argument and how the ideas/arguments interact with each other. EXAMPLE INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES

Poster Analysis

Students analyze World War II posters, chosen from online collections, to explore how argument, persuasion and propaganda differ. The lesson begins with a full-class exploration of the famous, "I Want You for the U.S. Army" poster, wherein students explore the similarities and differences between argument, persuasion and propaganda, and apply one of the genres to the poster.

Editorial Style

• Students select an editorialist whose writing they find compelling and read five of that writer's editorials. Students analyze word choice, rhetorical strategies and effectiveness.

• Students choose a current topic and write editorials imitating the style of the author.

• Students compose an additional writer's memo detailing specific parallels between their editorials and the author's editorial.

Compare/Contrast

- Students read "Letter from Birmingham Jail" and then evaluate a picture, a cartoon and a video relating to civil rights.
- Students compare and contrast the message in the original text to the messages in the picture, cartoon and video.

(Frames of Mind: A Rhetorical Reader with Occasions for Writing by Robert Dianni and Patsy Hoy)

Create Your Own Historical Document

Before reading historical documents, students create one of their own (e.g., farewell address to their classmates, a state of the union about their accomplishments and goals over the past year). Then, after discussing themes and content of their own, students read the original document. This strategy scaffolds them into understanding the genre.

Suitable for Texting

Students analyze 17th-, 18th- and 19th-century foundational U.S. documents of historical and literary significance for their themes, purposes and rhetorical features.

• Basic: Rewrite the Mayflower Compact into a message suitable for texting. Define the audience, research the meaning of the unfamiliar words, determine to whom the text would be sent, etc.

• Extended: Write a four-sentence précis for the Mayflower Compact.

Summarizing a historical document into four sentences or into a modern texting format hones analytical skills to find the important details. Have students consider the audience of both the original and a new audience. Students could create a new compact using the basic argument of the Mayflower Compact.

Time Period Comparison

Students compare texts from a time period on an issue with historical events resulting from those beliefs. End with a seminar letting students draw and support their own conclusions. Students need to synthesize materials and evaluate the information.

Text Complexity

Students use a readability program to find text complexity that aligns to their grade level. Before students can accept the challenge of accelerating text complexity, they should understand just what it is, how writers achieve it, how it affects understanding or enjoyment of reading. We read for different purposes (e.g., college vs. high school text, consumer camera manual vs. heavy equipment manual). Students need a cadre of reading techniques to manage between college, the workplace and the marketplace.

Basic: Students select a complicated instructional manual for a consumer product (e.g., Video Camera Manual), and judge the education level of the consumer. Students then determine what adjustments could be made in the directions to simplify the manual.

Extended: Compare high school chemistry text readability with a College Level I Chemistry text. What additional skills does the college student need in order to be successful with the college text? Compare text complexity in a chemistry or social studies text, college text, etc. For more information, visit http://www.achieve.org/node/946

Directed Reading Teaching Activities

Use Directed Reading Teaching Activities (DRTA) with students to activate their prior knowledge, prompt them to make predictions and test their hypotheses through the reading.

• Students read selection title (and perhaps a bit of the selection) and make predictions about content.

- Students read to first predetermined stop. They confirm, refine or reject their initial hypotheses and justify their ideas with reference to the text. Students then make new hypotheses.
- Students read the next section and follow procedures in step two. This cycle continues until text is read.

ELA Curriculum Framework: Culturally Relevant ELA: Mexican American Viewpoint Strand: Writing Clusters in this strand: • Text Types and Purposes Production and Distribution of Writing Research to Build and Present Knowledge Range of Writing • Anchor Standards Assessment Summary: For students to be college and career reader, writing is a key means of asserting and defending claims, showing what they know about a subject, and conveying what they have experienced, imagined, thought, and felt. They need to know how to combine elements of different kinds of writing—for example, to use narrative strategies within argument and explanation within narrative—to produce complex and nuanced writing. They need to be able to use technology strategically when creating, refining, and collaborating on writing. They have to become adept at gathering information, evaluating sources, and citing material accurately, reporting findings from their research and analysis of sources in a clear and cogent manner. They must have the flexibility, concentration, and fluency to produce high-quality first draft text under a tight deadline as well as the capacity to revisit and make improvements to a piece of writing over multiple drafts when circumstances encourage or require it. Instructional Resources: Source: ADE/ELA Committee http://www.azed.gov http://commoncore.org http://www.corestandards.org/assets/Appendix A.pdf See Appendix A for Text Complexity http://www.corestandards.org/assets/Appendix B.pdf See Appendix B for Text Exemplars http://www.corestandards.org/assets/Appendix C.pdf See Appendix C for Writing Exemplars Vocabulary: http://www.tn.gov/education/ci/doc/VOCABULARY.pdf Diverse Learners: English Language Learners: -(ELLs in an ELD Program will use the ELP standards for English Language Development- See Standards at http://www.azed.gov/english-language-learners/elps/ For more guidance on the ELLs and the Common Core please see http://www.corestandards.org/assets/application-for-english-learners.pdf For additional effective instructional strategies see SIOP Strategies at: http://www.misd.net/bilingual/ELL.pdf

- c. Use a variety of techniques to sequence events so that they build on one another to create a coherent whole and build toward a particular tone and outcome (e.g., a sense of mystery, suspense, growth, or resolution).
- d. Use precise words and phrases, telling details, and sensory language to convey a vivid picture of the experiences, events, setting, and/or characters.
- e. Provide a conclusion that follows from and reflects on what is experienced, observed, or resolved over the course of the narrative.

EXAMPLE INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES

Argumentative Writing Strategies

After frontloading strategies using the SOAPST one strategy, students find and read opinion/editorial examples from different newspapers about a single topic. The students analyze these to determine the strategies writers use to create a logical argument.

- S = subject
- O = occasion
- A = audience
- P = purpose
- S = speaker
- T = tone

More information about this strategy can be found at http://faculty.stuartschool.org/~leckstrom/SOAPSToneAnalysisStrategy.htm

Evaluating Models of Performance

- Explain the criteria for a particular writing assignment.
- Show students models of essays representing a range of scores.
- Have students assess them based on the criteria discussed.
- Students can use this knowledge to write their own essay with the same criteria.

(See Appendix C – Samples of Student Writing in the Common Core Standards.)

Podcast

Students podcast personal Web page/Facebook page narratives. Podcasting skills include collaboration, writing, speaking, presentation, communication, technology, auditory, storytelling and information. In addition, students enhance their media literacy and oral fluency. Examples include This I Believe (NPR), Laws of Life and Digital Writing Workshop (Troy Hicks).

Photo Gallery

Students take photographs that illustrate a piece of their writing and create a hallway or gallery display of their pictures and writing. Invite faculty and other classes for an author's talk in the gallery, with each writer reading and discussing his or her work.

Plan Strategy with STOP

Students follow these steps to develop and organize their ideas for a piece of persuasive writing:

- Suspend your judgment and generate as many ideas on each side of the argument as possible.
- Take a side.

• Organize your notes and ideas and decide which ideas you are going to use to support your side and which ideas are going to be used to refute on the opposing side.

• Plan as you write.

This strategy can be teacher led or student directed. With the last step, writers continue to add, change or delete from the initial plan. For more information, visit www.thewritingteacher.org/writing-blog- home/2008/10/1/research-based-best-practices-for-teaching-writing-a-discussion.html

Multigenre/Multimodal Project

This strategy incorporates poems, texts, newspaper articles, art, music, videos, etc., which encourage students to avoid plagiarism through synthesizing multiple sources on a subject. Students create a self-sustaining generated question/problem to solve based on student investigation. (This idea may be considered as a possible senior or capstone project.)

Evaluating Samples of Teacher-Provided Logical Fallacies

Evaluate the following for appropriate appeals in order to achieve purpose: logic, authority, emotion. Use sample research papers, ads, political commercials and position papers. Students evaluate and use multiple sources to assess the strengths and limitations of sources in terms of the task, purpose and audience.

Multiple Print and Digital Sources

Students brainstorm a list of items that combine different ways of expressing ideas, such as poster, DVD or a range of print, visual or sound texts. After the lists are shared, items are identified as texts (audio texts, video texts, etc.). Students then create an inventory of significant texts that they have engaged with over a specified period of time and discuss why it is important to interact with a variety of different types of texts. More information about this strategy can be found at http://www.learner.org/workshops/middlewriting/p5 tr transcript.html

Revision Conferences

Encourage revision for selected pieces of writing. Before revising, have students use a rubric to self-score their own papers. Then, confer with students individually about their strengths, weaknesses and plans for improvement. Have students highlight or underline their improvements when they submit the revised version.

Quick Writes/Timed Writing

Students respond to focused prompts that center on key ideas for current task, purpose and audience. Students can reflect as individuals or as a class on assignment. Use this strategy as a refocus opportunity when entering the classroom.

 Presentation of Knowledge and Ideas Anchor Standards Assessment Summary: To become college and career ready, students must have ample opportunities to take part in a variety of rich, structured conversations—as part of a whole class, in small groups, and with a partner—built around important content. They must be able to contribute appropriately to these conversations, to make comparisons and contrasts, and to analyze and synthesize a multitude of ideas in accordance with the standards of evidence appropriate to a particular discipline. Whatever their intended major or profession, high school graduates will depend heavily on their ability to listen attentively to others so that they are able to build on others' meritorious ideas while expressing their own clearly and persuasively. The Internet has accelerated the speed at which connections between speaking, listening, reading, and writing can be made, requiring that students be ready to use these modalities nearly simultaneously. Technology itself is changing quickly, creating a new urgency for students to be adaptable in response to change.

Research and Present

Using a major current event (e.g., BP Oil Spill), students evaluate multiple sources, speeches, reports and documentaries covering the event to determine similarities and differences of the various representations of biases from most to least objective. Extended: Using the continuum of bias, students analyze two sources on the extreme end of the spectrum. Then, students create a biased piece from the most unbiased piece and vice-versa. In an oral and written presentation, students present the products and justifications.

Critical Thinking/Inquiry

How does a person remain objective in the face of overwhelming catastrophe? What must one consider during this type of event? Who is at risk? Who is safe? How do we weigh cost vs. human/animal life? Students can explore these questions and the importance of primary source information by reviewing historical information about medicine at http://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC194789/.

Socratic Seminar

Students learn and participate in a Socratic Seminar based on texts they are reading. Students can be assigned different sections of the writing and then alternate as discussion leaders. Information about a Socratic Seminar can be found at http://www.saskschools.ca/curr_content/bestpractice/socratic/index.html

Dramatize

Students dramatize information from a scene in a non-fiction work or informational text conveying appropriate tone/mood and videotape for presentation. Students present information to aid understanding of material and creatively present to audience.

Digital Project

Students create a digital project to enhance understanding of their written findings/textual evidence. Keep the requirements broad enough to encourage creativity and choice. For example, require students to use one visual element, one audio element and one text element. Students can create a video with a song playing in the background that includes excerpts from the text. Students can write a song using excerpts from the text and sing it to the class.

Adding Modifiers

Take a core sentence without any modifiers and increasingly make the sentence more specific. Have students look at a range of five sentences and discuss which one provides the most specific information.

Student-Evaluation, Peer-Evaluation

Students examine individual writings/paragraphs to the bones. They analyze sentence structure, length, punctuation and verb strength. This strategy allows students to pay attention to syntax and diction in order to improve to mature writers. It also helps them make effective choices for meaning and style.

Compelling Sentences

- Students select two to three consecutive and compelling sentences from a written work they are studying in class.
- Students analyze the usage (diction, punctuation, grammar, etc.)
- Students craft similar sentences or change original sentences and discuss the effects of the changes

ELA Curriculum Framework: Culturally Relevant ELA: Mexican American Viewpoint

Strand: Language Grades 11-12

Cluster: Vocabulary Acquisition and Use

Enduring Understanding: Words are powerful. Vocabulary knowledge is fundamental for learning, effective communication and celebrating language. Success in the post-secondary setting, as well as the workplace, requires effective communication.

Essential Questions: (refer to Appendix A for extended sample Essential Questions tied to specific Topics of Study)

Standard Statements

The student reader will

11-12.L.4 Determine or clarify the meaning of unknown and multiplemeaning words and phrases based on grades 11-12 reading and content, choosing flexibly from a range of strategies.

- a. Use context (e.g., the overall meaning of a sentence, paragraph, or text; a word's position or function in a sentence) as a clue to the meaning of a word or phrase.
- b. Identify and correctly use patterns of word changes that indicate different meanings or parts of speech (e.g., conceive, conception, conceivable).
- c. Consult general and specialized reference materials (e.g., dictionaries, glossaries, thesauruses), both print and digital, to find the pronunciation of a word or determine or clarify its precise meaning, its part of speech, its etymology, or its standard usage.
- d. Verify the preliminary determination of the meaning of a word or phrase (e.g., by checking the inferred meaning in context or in a dictionary).

11-12.L.5 Demonstrate understanding of figurative language, word relationships, and nuances in word meanings.

- a. Interpret figures of speech (e.g. hyperbole, paradox) in context and analyze their role in the text.
- b. Analyze nuances in the meaning of words with similar denotations.

11-12.L.6 Acquire and use accurately general academic and domainspecific words and phrases, sufficient for reading, writing, speaking, and listening at the college and career readiness level; demonstrate independence in gathering vocabulary knowledge when considering a word or phrase important to comprehension or expression.

Examples and Explanations English 5, 6 *see previous examples

English 7, 8 *see previous examples

In the previous grade band...

Students were expected to determine or clarify the meaning of unknown and multiple-meaning words or phrases based on grades 9-10 reading and content, demonstrate understanding of figurative language, word relationships and nuances in word meanings, and acquire and accurately use grade-appropriate words or phrases.

Figurative Language and Cartoons

Collect cartoons and comic strips that illustrate figurative language. Distribute these to students and have them work in pairs or small groups to determine and interpret the reason for use of the figurative language example illustrated in each cartoon. Then have them draw their own examples.

Skits and New Vocabulary

Students work with a partner or in groups to create skits that illustrate new vocabulary words or figures of speech. Putting the words in action makes them concrete; students are more likely to remember both the words and their meaning.

Four Corners

Using a multiple-meaning word (homonym, homograph, homophone) or an unknown word (such as predilection in the sentence "This predilection for minding other people's business was time-honored among the people of Salem, and it undoubtedly created many of the suspicions which were to feed the coming madness." Arthur Miller's The Crucible), students complete the following activity.

Each student or group receives a different word. Before coming across the unfamiliar word in their reading, students should write the vocabulary word in the center of a note card.

- In the upper left-hand corner, they take a guess at its definition.
- In the upper-right hand corner, they write a definition of the word after reading it in context.
- In the bottom left-hand corner, they write the correct definition of the word after looking it up.
- Finally, in the bottom right-hand corner, they write other forms of the word using its root or suffix or prefix.

Critical Thinking and Inquiry

Using the note cards discussed above, conduct a review by choosing one card out of those collected and reading the word. Have students attempt to define the word. This graphic organizer and the continued practice/review would lead to mastery of the group of words. Assign differentiated ability groups for filling out the note cards, grouping high and low students together.
