

Biography of John Morton

John Morton is the senior program officer for the Arizona Council on Economic Education. Previously, he was an economics teacher at Homewood-Flossmoor High School (Illinois), founder and director of the Governors State University Center for Economic Education (Illinois), founder and president of the Arizona Council on Economic Education, and vice president for program development for the Council for Economic Education (CEE). He chaired the advisory board of The Wall Street Journal Classroom Edition for several years.

Mort has written over 60 publications and books of instructional activities for the high school economics course, including four widely used textbooks and several CEE curriculum books. He is the author of Advanced Placement Economics (CEE), a widely used supplemental package for the AP Economics Course.

He has taught hundreds of workshops for thousands of teachers in the United States and other countries.

Mort has received awards for teaching economics and personal finance, including the Bessie Moore Service Award and the John C. Schramm Leadership Award from the Council for Economic Education and the National Association of Economic Educators and the Freedoms Foundation Award for Excellence in Private Enterprise Education.