

To Whom It May Concern:

I taught high school and/or college economics for over 50 years. Among others, I was involved in writing the original economics section of the Arizona History and Social Science Standards. The 2018 version of the standards closely follow the content of the original standards.

Ethics, Economy and Entrepreneurship (EEE) authored by Cathleen Johnson, Robert Lusch, and David Schmitz thoroughly covers this content. The 2018 standards place a greater emphasis on inquiry and an analytical way of thinking than the original standards did. This is where the EEE curriculum shines. Adding ethics gives students a chance to ask what kind of life and society do we want to live in. The course and the book are excellent for helping students explore perspectives and take ethical action.

John Morton
December 5, 2018